GLOBAL TOURISM FROM POSTCOLONIAL AND OTHER CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES

INPUTS THEME SEMESTER IN THE SUMMER OF 2019

including Forschungskolloquium
Forum INPUTS

 Universität Bremen

Tourism today is an industry that contributes 10 % of the global GDP and 30 % of the global services market. Over 1.2 billion international tourists are on the move each year. Many people in Western Europe take holidays in South-East Asia or South America for granted. The number of very young backpackers, travelling to “exotic” destinations on a tight budget, and volunteers working in orphanages, language schools or nature projects is growing each year. Within Europe, cheap flights and accommodation booking sites have contributed to the growth of so-called city breaks, especially on “long weekends”.

In the summer semester of 2019, INPUTS invites you to have a conversation about the consequences of the global tourism industry from postcolonial, anti-racist and environmental perspectives, among others.

We will offer seminars, film screenings, guest lectures within the Forum INPUTS lecture series and a student panel during the conference “Postcolonial Oceans. Contradictions and Heterogeneities in the Epistemes of Salt Water”, to take place on 30 May-2 June 2019 at the University of Bremen.
